I will start this off by saying that I almost always read the books before I watch the movies. I didn't this time.

I went and watched this last weekend. I have to say that I was so mad several times during the movie.

Have you seen it? Have you read the book?

Are you talking about Unbroken? I did see this. I was angry throughout the movie too. I did not read the book and I don't want to read it now. I am glad that he was able to go back to Japan and meet with some of his captors before he passed away. I wish the movie would have shown a bit more of his life once the war was over and he returned back to the US.

I have seen Unbroken. It was really something else. I sort of went into the theater blind, only knowing bits & pieces of what I might see. I was a little shocked, and found the movie to be a bit long in parts. Seriously, how many times can you see the poor man be beat before it just becomes too much to watch?

I agree with Rockstar as well. I wish more of his life after coming back to the United States was shown. I actually really enjoyed the ending, and found it charming.
