Transparent is an Amazon-exclusive TV show. There are currently two seasons available for streaming. I started watching it a few nights ago and now I'm hooked. It's about a 60-something grandfather who has finally worked up the courage to come out as trans-gender to his family and how they all come to terms with it afterwards.

I know the show you're talking about. It took me forever to catch the play on words in the title! (Transparent = trans parent) It's a good show.

Are you into season two yet? I just finished season one the night before last and started season two last night. I fell asleep during the first episode, though, so I'll have to go back and watch it again today/tonight.

Yeah I've watched the first two or three episodes of season two. So far I don't like season two as much as season one. I'm not really understanding some of the decisions Maura's kids are making.
