I just learned about this streaming service last night. It's called Qello and it's basically like Netflix but all concerts. How cool is that?! And I think it's less than ten dollars a month, too. We're going to try it out for a month for free but I'm pretty sure we'll wind up regular subscribers.

I just checked on that and it's still going. It's through Amazon I believe. If I need help streaming this to my television, is anyone here able to help?

These days, devices capable of streaming audio/video make it almost trivial to do. You don't have to setup your computer and connect, or to do anything special. You just connect your device to the internet and television and select a stream. Click and go.
