I haven't been to a concert in a very long time, so I don't know what the answer to this is: Do they still turn up the volume so loud that you need earplugs in the front rows? If so, what's the point of this?

I haven't attended a concert in a few years but, when it comes to volume, I just assumed the rule was the louder the better.

Yeah... Volume is always very loud at live concerts. I wouldn't say you need earplugs in the front row, though. One of the reasons I go to a concert is to hear the music that loud.

The volume is still very loud at concerts. I always try to avoid the first few rows because I can't stand not being able to hear for a few days afterwards.
