Subject: The New Collectibles
Posted by Miami on Thu, 12 May 2016 08:10:23 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

The Apple Iphones from the early 2000's are fetching good money on E-Bay these days as collectibles. If you have any you might want to look into this.

Subject: Re: The New Collectibles
Posted by Lizah on Thu, 12 May 2016 16:20:29 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I wish I would have known that people were still interested in phones like this because I just got rid of a few of mine. I didn't even think that they would be worth anything because they can't be updated as far as the new ones can, which limits what you can do on them.

Subject: Re: The New Collectibles
Posted by Csharp on Fri, 13 May 2016 18:56:57 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

That might be part of the appeal. Technology that is stuck where it was when it became outdated by newer technology.

I never have owned Apple products though, so I'm out of luck with this one.

Subject: Re: The New Collectibles
Posted by decibel 12 on Wed, 25 May 2016 01:40:22 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Kind of like a radio with only an AM band?

I know some people who would like to hear about this.....thank you for the information.