I just put a new Pioneer system in my car, and the difference in sound between that and my home stereo is very noticeable. Do you switch up the types of music you listen to in your car versus your home system because of the difference in sound quality between the 2 systems?

Not consciously. Although in the back of mind I sometimes tell myself not to play certain CD's on the home system because it doesn't sound as good as when it plays in the car.

There are certain CDs I will not play in my home system, albeit subconsciously. The quality of sound is definitely better in the car. What sound system do you use at home?

I have a Bose sound system in my car, so I definitely notice a difference in sound quality. There are times when I'm not even thinking about it and I put in a CD at home and I have to take it back out because it just doesn't sound right to me. I think it might be time to upgrade my sound system at home.

I have always thought to myself that at times the reason a certain CD will sound better in the car is because we have taught our minds to believe this. Nonetheless, I think the car offers flexibility in terms of installation of a quality sound system.

I keep certain CDs in the car that do not come in the house. Actually, at this time, the home system is better than the one in my car. It's on my list to get this fixed soon.
