So far, everything about Windows 10 works perfectly for me. However, I think that a lot more needs to be done about the logo. The interface too is not very pleasing to the eye. I only use it because it seems that it drains my battery slowly.

I agree completely, sawyer25. I don't like the look of Edge at all and I only use it occasionally. I end up using Chrome more because I can set it up that way that I want it. I wonder if there is a way to customize Edge and we just don't know it yet?

I actually like the layout of the browser. I think it's got a style on its own. Because it's different, I had a hard time finding settings or options because I was used to other browsers. I didn't use Edge much because of this. Do you think it loads slower than other browsers, though?

When Edge first came out, it had a lot of flaws that made it unusable. Win10 users were basically forced to use Firefox or Chrome. While I still think those are better browsers, the major problems with Edge have been solved. I can run Edge now, although I still tend to prefer Firefox.

Hi, I prefer Firefox as well but have run into a few sites (like MySprint, and once my bank) that have trouble with it and you must use something else.

I have always been a Google Chrome person but I don't mind this browser at all. The layout and everything else are different but unique at the same time.

It takes time to get used to this but once you figure out the basics, you're then good to go.

That browser is too full of news stories and it's too distracting to me. I have my preferences that work good for me and I just don't have the time to re-configure a new one to meet needs that have already been met.

I'm sure it has it's positive qualities, but I just don't care enough to find out what they are.

I'm a little too set in my ways to really even try to understand how Edge works. I always just use my Chrome and so far I'm happy with it.
