I was looking through my CD collection the other day and found something that I haven't listen to in such a long time. I found my first Violent Femmes CD. I can't believe that this album has been out for thirty years now. I was also surprised to learn that they are still touring. Have you ever looked through your music collection and found something that you've forgotten that you've had for such a long time? What was it?

I look through my music collection from time to time so as to just reminisce the past. That is the basic reason why proper storage is really vital. You can imagine the kind of disappointment a person may feel if their favorite collection cannot play.
