Subject: Advice for newbie gamer?
Posted by chatzy02 on Mon, 03 Oct 2016 21:29:13 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I recently got bit by the online gaming bug, and I've been playing hours and hours every week. Now I've decided that it's time to get the right equipment so that I can get the full experience from my games. I want to know how best to get started sound-wise. If there are any gamers here please assist.

Subject: Re: Advice for newbie gamer?
Posted by Lizah on Thu, 06 Oct 2016 14:19:38 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

There are a ton of products out there now for PC gaming from every price range. So, I guess it all depends on how much you want to spend. I just bought my husband a Corsair Gaming Audio Series setup for around $200. It comes with two speakers, a subwoofer, and a remote. It's so powerful that it actually shakes the walls!

Subject: Re: Advice for newbie gamer?
Posted by moss24 on Thu, 06 Oct 2016 19:38:42 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I have never been gamer but like you, I may soon start trying to learn a few things. My brothers are addicted to gaming and they never understand how I have never had any interest.

Subject: Re: Advice for newbie gamer?
Posted by chatzy02 on Thu, 06 Oct 2016 21:13:43 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Lizah wrote on Thu, 06 October 2016 09:19There are a ton of products out there now for PC gaming from every price range. So, I guess it all depends on how much you want to spend. I just bought my husband a Corsair Gaming Audio Series setup for around $200. It comes with two speakers, a subwoofer, and a remote. It's so powerful that it actually shakes the walls!
Thanks so much for the suggestion. I will definitely check the Corsair Gaming Audio Series out. It sounds like just what I need to take my gaming to the next level.