Subject: A catty speaker problem
Posted by PianoGrrl on Fri, 09 Dec 2016 08:57:25 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I have new speakers, and a new kitten. These are not a good mix (well, the cat thinks her scratching post is great...) How do I prevent the cat tearing my speakers to shreds without reducing the sound quality. Putting them up high left her learning parkour, and enclosing them muffles it.

Yes, she has another scratching post. She just prefers speakers.

Subject: Re: A catty speaker problem
Posted by Wayne Parham on Fri, 09 Dec 2016 15:58:08 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

That's always a tough one. Stands that get the speakers out of reach are one option. Sometimes you can install grilles that can't be harmed, like metal mesh.