That last post I just visited inspired me to look around for more information on audio DIY. I came across a site that has loads of links (all the one's I clicked are still good) that takes you to sites which tell you how to build various stringed instruments.

It looks fascinating.

That link is quite inspiring but I guess that building a stringed instrument from scratch would be expensive. I would embark on such a venture, just to test my DIY skills.

What a cool site! Thank you for sharing. I'm sure it would be expensive, but it'd be worth it in my opinion. It seems like a great way to take the plunge and start doing some DIY projects, which I've been meaning to do for some time. Thanks again for sharing this with us. It's a great resource.

This is just unreal! I never thought to build my DIY guitar before. I know that it will probably test my resolve, but it will be fun to see the outcome. Thanks.
