My siblings can stay awake to the wee hours of morning, just so that they can finish whatever they are watching. The latest I can stay awake is 10:00pm; anything past this, no matter how captivating it may be, is always a lullaby.

Sometimes, with a lot of coffee and friends, I'll stay up for something good, normally something shown live like a PPV rather than a film though. With Tivo and DVDs and bookmarking it is so easy to just turn them off, get some sleep, and come back to them.

I have stayed awake to finish movies and series since I started getting interested to watch movies. If it's an interesting movie, I am so bent to finish every series that's available.

If I have not stressed myself much for the day, then there is no big deal with staying awake to finish watching a movie as long as such movie is quite interesting for me to watch. I can only sleep off if I have been stressed out or had a hectic day at the office.

I don't joke with my sleeping time and that is the reason that I am always very careful with what I watch at night. If it is a movie series, I watch a few episodes and once it is around 11 pm, I should be planning to sleep or even force myself to sleep because the next day is a working day for me.
