What is the best way of removing wall speakers when you are moving from the house? Is it even possible to reinstall them in the new house or will they get damaged?

I think I read somewhere that you risk damaging or even destroying your wall speakers when you take them out. I think your best bet would be to consult a professional because it might also depend on the kind of speakers you have and how they were installed.

I once had a really difficult time when I was moving to my current house because of the wall speakers. They ended up functioning well but that's the last time I ever had them on the walls.
