I've been called both, but I'd really love to know what you guys think is the difference between the two. Thoughts?

For a long time, I always thought that nerds and geeks are one and the same thing. Apparently, nerds tend to have a higher understanding of principles, than geeks. Other people would argue otherwise but the bottom line is that there's a difference.

It's the difference between Comic-con and Ted Talks or Harry Potter and Lord of the Rings. If you understand what I mean, then you're a nerd.

A geek is a social construct while a being a nerd is a lifestyle choice.

I actually have no idea what the difference is, other than I always saw the two as the same.....with the geek being the smarter of the two.

I think nerds are the smarter ones. Or at least the cooler ones. These days we are seeing more and more hot nerds around.
