Think of your favorite musical artist. Now think about their entire body of work. If you were to put all of their lyrics on paper, do you think there would be enough to make the average sized book?

If so, do you think the book would make any sense if your tried to put them all into the order that would actually make a book readable?

I think that would be one really big book, and totally unreadable by the average person. When it comes to creativity, often what makes sense to one person is total nonsense to another.

It would be interesting to see someone try. Taken as a whole like that would give a different feel to each individual lyric that wasn't there before.

It is an interesting concept, that's for sure. Like a concept album on steroids in the lyrical sense.

I don't know if it would work though.
