Could someone point me in the direction of a Facebook page.....or account....whatever you kids call it these days, that is about nothing but music? I'm looking for ideas on a "Facebook niche" I would like to put up and music is one of my areas of expertise.

Are you talking sites that bands have, like The Stones, and emulating that somehow?

Just type in "music" in the search bar when you're logged in and see what pops up.

It's pretty easy to get to those fan pages but I think you have to get really specific about what you want because there are so many of them around.

I always find it hard to come across a page (on Facebook) that's purely about music. You'll find two or three people who have no interest in the topic, posting about their businesses or any other topic. As Lark has mentioned, you can try narrowing down into a specific niche or musician.

In this era you would have to be trying really hard to avoid coming into contact with those kind of facebook pages. I know my friends keep asking me to 'like' a lot of those kind of pages.
