My daughter likes putting up the volume to the maximum when she's listening to something on her tablet and I know this is what she does with her earphones as well - even though I've told her over and over not to do it. Are there any kind of earphones for kids that I could get for her that limit the sound to a safe level?

Hey chatzy02, you could always threaten to take away her tablet if she doesn't abide by your rules. However, if you don't want to do that, check out this link,

There's nothing as bad as noise-induced hearing loss, especially in a child. I'm just wondering if there's going to be any trouble for children who will be curious with adjusting the volume?

As I am a "GoldenOldie", I am of the perception that loud headphones on children are a bad thing. Their hearing could be damaged and lead to problems later in life. I wished I would have listened to my mom about this as I have difficulty now.
