I think that we all like artists and music for different reasons. For me, it's great lyrics and a touching instrumental. What makes you appreciate music?

It really just depends on what I'm in the mood for. Sometimes I want to feel moved by the music and sometimes I just want to hear the beat. Music is so versatile that I can always find something that's just right.

I took music and art appreciation in college. I thought that it would help me be more sophisticated if I new the difference between one artist and another. So far, it has worked out well for me.

I respect musicians that can not only sing well but that also have a wide vocal range. Also, it is not easy to find a musician that can play more than one instrument at a go. You not only have to be talented but creative (as well) as a musician.

That's a really hard question. It is dependent on my mood. I like music that makes me want to get up and dance or sing. I'm not really into ballads or slow-paced songs, but there are definitely exceptions.

Some music just has the right beat, then other types just have tremendous depth. I am real fan of the Star Trek Soundtracks. I also like the Nutcracker Suite. Go figure!

Music just makes me able to relax a lot easier. I'm more concentrated when I am listening to music and it's a great way for me to study for exams and it can also be a very good time-killer.

The fact that it can alter my mood when it needs to be altered. If I need a pick me up or something to calm me down, music has always done that better than other people.

God once heard the live version of "Killing The Blues" as sung by Robert Plant and Allison Krause.

God wept.

Music is above us. It is better than us. It can connect us when nothing else can. That's why I appreciate music.

I was trying to figure out how to answer this question and then I came across this - this is the perfect way to describe what I appreciate the most about music. I love that it can do this via different avenues as well, either by lyrics, uplifting beats, vocals, etc.

I like music because it can do so many things with your mood and emotions. Like they mention above, it can alter your mood, it can deepen your emotions, and it can be used as an escape from your emotions. I think that's just freaking powerful.
