Subject: Choosing a video display
Posted by cwemoy on Sun, 06 Aug 2017 05:28:58 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Do you agree that you may have an excellent home theater system but have a display that's way too big for it? A picture that's too big doesn't always look good, so I'd like to know the rule of the thumb when choosing the display?

Subject: Re: Choosing a video display
Posted by Madison on Thu, 10 Aug 2017 00:56:01 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Yes, I agree wholeheartedly. Sometimes it actually hurts my eyes and gives me a headache. There's really no need for all of that.  Save it for the movie theater as a treat.

Subject: Re: Choosing a video display
Posted by moss24 on Tue, 15 Aug 2017 18:29:20 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Well, I can't think of a general rule of the thumb but I believe that the size of the room plays a part. Don't go for a display that's too big or too small for the room.