If you're talented at discerning just what the artist is singing, this extra money earner might be great for you. The company is called WeLocalize and they're hiring folks to transcribe lyrics. It pays $4 per completed song and you can pick the genre from what they have available. I don't have the skill set for this one. Has anyone here tried this out? It sure sounds like an amusing way to earn some fun money.

Now that sounds like something worth looking into. Perfect for music lovers. I wonder who their clients are.

Thank you for the tip and links.

As cool as this is, it's definitely not for me. I'm terrible at discerning what artists are saying. $4 also seems a little low for transcribing a full song that surely has a lot of spots with tricky lyrics. But if you've got the time and talent, it could be worthwhile.
