There is a company called Tech Insider, and I have them on my Facebook feed. The other day, something came through showing how scientists created wood you can see through. If possible to make, would you buy speakers made of wood you can see through?

As far as I can tell, the clear wood has the same properties and physical make-up as regular wood.

Well, anything that's clear would look creepy to me though I wouldn't mind having a few of these speakers, just to create some variety in the living room. How much do these approximately cost?
