I had a friend that learned macrame in order to put his huge speakers suspended from the ceiling and he swore that is made the sound much better. Can anyone speak to the validity of this claim?

Though I have never tried it before, I believe that the speakers can still hang and produce excellent sound. There are various positioning techniques and I guess this is one of them. The important thing is to do it correctly.

Wow, this sounds like a really good idea! It would not get reverberation of the floor so I would think the sound would be great! I'm going to try this and see what happens!

I would assume that the best sound effect is gotten by hanging these speakers not so high above. I've also heard that too much bass could make them sway, if they have not been fixed properly. Still, I have previously seen a variety of macrame speaker hangers that looked great. Sounds like a creative idea.
