Have any of you ever gotten headaches or strange pain from using Bluetooth headphones? I once bought these wireless Bluetooth headphones, which I thought were incredibly convenient, but I started getting these unique strange head pains when using them.

Hi, Sort of unusual. My guess is that some noise either below audio frequencies or above them is getting through and causing the problem. It also might be some form of harmonic distortion present in the amplifier section that is irritating.

That's happened to me too, but I believe it was the material that they were made of rather than audio quality. I ended up with a headache every time I'd wear them for a while, but the music sounded fine and they fit well.
