Now that it's holiday season, I'm sure that there will be plenty of specials or sales going on. Where is the best place to look for a home theater system at a good price?

Sadly, the best deals were probably during Black Friday and Cyber Monday, but I'm sure there will still be some great ones out there. For brick and mortar stores, I think Best Buy and Sears usually have some of the best deals. Best of luck!

I don't know, Perfect Storm, I've seen some pretty good deals at both of those places during this time of year. At least at Best Buy. I don't think I've been inside a Sears for a while. If you have a membership to somewhere like Costco, that could be a really good place to check too!

I'm kind of running out of time here, but I have been searching online as well. Thanks for the suggestions, guys. Best Buy seems like the logical place to start.

I suppose I should start a new thread, but I might as well as here. What all did you guys buy others or yourselves lately in terms of audio equipment?

I'm bummed that I wasn't ready to purchase my system during the past Black Friday, and I missed out on so many great deals. Oh, well. I just have to do my best now to research and find another great deal. I know it's there somewhere. Any thoughts?
