Do you think that some music is preferable on different sources? Or do you think that everything sounds better in a hi-def source? What do you think the exceptions could be?

I think most times that MP3s sound great, are easy to work with, and are affordable. It doesn't make sense to always look for that hi-def audio.

I don't know much about it, but do you need a special hi-def player to go with your hi-def music or will an ipod play those songs as well? I remember Sony came out with a hi-def player a few years ago that was pricey.
