I was just wondering if anyone else is alone this Christmas? I had the option of visiting some friends who are having a barbecue but I just didn't feel up to it and would rather be alone. Is this weird?

Not at all. I think we would all be much better off living our lives in a way that feels good to us rather than trying to conform to society's standards. If you feel like being alone at Christmas then be alone.

Might feel good to go to Salvation Army and give attention to folks there. I do that kind of service work in some organizations around where I live and it always warms my heart.

What a great idea Wayne. There is nothing like giving of yourself to others to help take your attention from your own troubles, especially during this time.
