
Subject: Are there any brands you refuse to work on?
Posted by Madison on Sat, 17 Mar 2018 02:26:38 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Are there any brands you've washed your hands of when considering projects like repairs or adjustments? Too complicated, too expensive, too hard to find parts? I'm curious because I have a hard time finding "fixers". Could be what I'm buying though.

Subject: Re: Are there any brands you refuse to work on?
Posted by gofar99 on Sat, 17 Mar 2018 19:36:37 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Hi, Brands...not so much...but anything made in the past few years as most use proprietary integrated circuits and surface mounted components. Neither of which is fun to try to diagnose and repair.

Subject: Re: Are there any brands you refuse to work on?
Posted by Madison on Sun, 18 Mar 2018 00:40:24 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

That might be my issue then. Radio Shack might have been outdated, but that place was great for little parts as well as people who knew how to fix things. Thank you for answering, gofar99!
