Subject: Multiple Bluetooth headsets next to each other

The local media library has several computers installed next to each other. Until recently, they provided wired headsets. But these were constantly being broken.

I suggested Bluetooth headsets but the question arose if they would interfere with each other as the computers are physically close to each other?

Is it possible to connect a specific Bluetooth headset to a specific computer?

I could be wrong, but I think that it's standard for Bluetooth headphones to be attached to only one device. I know that some of them are able to connect to multiple devices, but I don't think that's the norm.
