I'd like to add another speaker to my setup and I'm wondering if it's okay to use different brands for your speakers? Or do you think it's best to get them all from the same brand?

The speakers you choose should have similar characteristics, especially mains. So whichever brand you choose, make sure they have the same tonal characteristics as the ones you have.

Personally, I'd get speakers from one brand and call it good. Speaker companies know what works best within their brands so it would only make sense to stay with the same brand. If you can't do that, then find a company where the specs are really close to the speakers you currently own.
