
Subject: How to keep the neighbors' noise out

Posted by Lost the Remote on Fri, 11 May 2018 20:36:24 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I bought a quiet little apartment, but since I've lived here, one of my neighbors has had twins and gotten a yapping dog while the other neighbor has become hard of hearing and listens to country music and various news stations very loudly. Neither neighbor is being purposefully inconsiderate. So far, I've been dealing with it by using various earplugs and earphones, but is there anything I can add to my space to keep out some of the noise?

Subject: Re: How to keep the neighbors' noise out

Posted by Strum Drum on Wed, 16 May 2018 23:46:12 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

This is actually kind of funny could you be neighbors with this thread creator
<https://audioroundtable.com/forum/index.php?t=msg&th=21887&start=0&>

I'm just kidding and really only wanted to point to jonnycamp5's reply which seems like advice you might be able to use too. He seems to know his stuff.

Subject: Re: How to keep the neighbors' noise out

Posted by Lost the Remote on Fri, 18 May 2018 00:56:08 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Luckily, my neighbors and I have all become friends over the years. I've spent holidays with them when my flight was snowed out and I couldn't go to my sisters. They haven't complained about my early mornings and heels clicking on the floor and I would never complain to them or the HOA either.

Thanks for sharing the link. I'm going to try johnnycamp5's advice since I'll be here for a few years.

Subject: Re: How to keep the neighbors' noise out

Posted by lilbill on Tue, 09 Oct 2018 20:21:19 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I have heard of, but not used, the db meter before. I think that the post in the link sums up what anyone can do to keep off unwanted noise. It would be great to live in a 'noisy' environment, but still not to get distracted by any kind of noise.

Subject: Re: How to keep the neighbors' noise out
Posted by Curry on Thu, 14 Jul 2022 13:12:48 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

You are in a tricky situation right there! I live in a rented apartment, and when there was so much noise, I talked with the agent before making the decision to move. Now I am enjoying peace again. So can you consider a conversation?

Subject: Re: How to keep the neighbors' noise out
Posted by basscleaner on Wed, 27 Nov 2024 08:56:17 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Unfortunately, noise proofing requires, anyway, loss of volume. Because you will have to reconstruct your adjacent walls, maybe add some layers to ceiling or(and) floor. Anycase, you need help from acoustic engineer, which will measure and(or) calculate soundproofing of your room fences to understand what to do for the task solution.
