Subject: Listening To Classical Music
Posted by Jazzy on Wed, 18 Jul 2018 09:31:26 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Do you listen to classical music? If so, when do you listen to it and which composer do you like to listen to? I listen to it when I need to relax, which is every night.

Many people don't listen to this type of music anymore. They see it as too old for their generation.

Subject: Re: Listening To Classical Music
Posted by Lennix on Wed, 18 Jul 2018 19:11:22 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I listen to classical music pretty regularly. I don't necessarily have a favorite composer that I listen to regularly, I just turn on our local station and listen to whatever they're playing. I usually listen to it in the car or while I'm doing chores around the house. It's very relaxing and, I won't lie, it makes me feel classy.

Classical music does seem less popular but I also think that it's something people listen to in private. There's not really news about it or anything, no gossip for the media to latch onto, so it's not something that people bring up regularly.

I went to a symphony a couple of months ago and was pleased to see a full house with people of all different ages.

Subject: Re: Listening To Classical Music
Posted by Junior on Fri, 20 Jul 2018 07:55:21 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I'm actually listening to Mozart right now while I'm replying here.

Many musicians, especially those who are playing in an orchestra usually don't have enough compensation for their labor. Many of the orchestra today are funded by governments or by rich people. If the orchestra has no support then many of the musicians play their parts for free.

Subject: Re: Listening To Classical Music
Posted by Jazzy on Tue, 24 Jul 2018 16:41:29 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I also like Mozart, but I prefer Bach.

I admit that I'm not updated with new classical composers. I listen to the great composers of old as their music is soothing to my ears.

It is sad that orchestra musicians are receiving less compensation these days compared to their work.