We have a few different ways to listen to the radio these days, all offering something unique. You've got your standard radio, your satellite radio, and radio apps like Pandora and Spotify. Which do you turn to the most and why?

Only XM Satellite. Then only as background music.

I didn't know Spotify was classified as online radio, but yeah, Spotify. I have the free version of that and You Tube, but you can do other things on your phone and not interupt Spotify. You Tube gets shut down when you try and do that.

One day we might get a YouTube app that can run in the background. I also use YouTube for my music-listening pleasure. I need to upgrade my phone first because I can't install Spotify anymore.

Can't you upgrade You Tube for a price so it doesn't do that? But the car radio is the one I listen to the most. Talk shows mainly. You can learn new things and you don't get that distracted when you're driving.

It all depends on my mood, really. I have access to all the modern options, but I still like the good, old-fashioned AM/FM radio from time to time.

Car radio mostly. I have a tuner for the stereo but I don't seem to use it much these days. Because of what I hear on the car radio.

A couple of local colleges each host decent stations. One plays a lot of oldies and R&B, but the DJs dig deep and play non-hits that should have gotten more airplay. Another station plays a lot of indie. I find it 50% cool and 50% whiny and annoying lol.
