The Oscars still need a host, but it looks like the Golden Globes are swimming along. What do you think of the hosts, Sandra Oh from Grey's Anatomy and Killing Eve and Andy Samberg from Brooklyn Nine-Nine? I prefer comedians myself, but I enjoy Sandra Oh as an actress.

Who do you think will win Best Drama? My money is on Black Panther. I thought the film would receive more nominations than it actually did which is disappointing. I saw A Star is Born and didn't like it, though I know most viewers loved the show and Lady Gaga's role in it. It received five nominations in all though Sam Elliot wasn't nominated for Best Supporting Actor which surprised me.

Do you have any Golden Globe predictions to make? What do you think about the nominations?

I don't have any strong feelings about the possible outcomes, but I'll be tuning in just to see more of Carol Burnett. I'm glad she's had an award named after her!

I'm game for listing the category winners I feel most strongly about.

Best Drama: Bohemian Rhapsody or Black Panther

Best Motion Picture: Crazy Rich Asians

Best Performance by Actress in Drama: Lady Gaga (Her stellar acting really surprised me.)

Best Performance by Actor in Drama: Rami Malek

Best Performance by Actress in Comedy: Constance Wu

Best Director: Bradley Cooper

Best Animated Motion Picture: Spider-Man: Into the Spider-Verse

Best Original Motion Picture: Ludwig Göransson

I'm clearly horrible at predicting these things. I'm glad that Bohemian Rhapsody and Rami Malek, as Freddie Mercury, won awards. Rami Malek's speech was beautiful.
