Another year has rolled by. Can't believe how fast they go!

And with that, it's time to reserve your room for the Lone Star AudioFest. The reservation links for LSAF 2019 are online and ready to use at the LoneStarAudiofest.com website.

See you there!

Hi Wayne, Maybe....if we can get some chassis made. Lack of them has severely hurt our ability to do business. Rodney had to move everything as well to a new location and now everything is in boxes. That must be a vintage photo as the preamp and amps are here with me and BTW work just fine. I am using a quad of "Oddwatts" right now with two for subs and two for the mains. Passive volume and selection preamp, all tube phono preamps and an active electronic crossover between the amps. A little "sand" doesn't seem to hurt the sound any. :)

OK, I'm all signed up and official. Once again my room won't be on the same floor as the show as the flight, hotel and car all got booked together and that puts me on another floor. It's OK as it's dramatically less expensive to book everything together.

There isn't any mention of seminars this time around so are they off the table this year?

Looking forward to the show. And BBQ. And chicken.

Looking forward to seeing you!

I didn't reach out to anyone about seminars this year, nor did I ask for a conference room. I did that the first couple of years in Tulsa, and also early on in Dallas. But after the second or third year, I started making it an every-other-year or every-third-year thing.

You know how it is though: It's not at all unlikely that an impassioned vendor will have what amounts to an impromptu seminar in their room. Keith Larson tends to do that when he comes, because he is an expert in acoustic measurements and that makes his room lively with academic discussions as opposed to listening. Some of the other vendors are like that too. I can definitely see someone get on a roll about multisubs and room acoustics or some other such thing. :)

We'll post the exhibitor list on Friday, along with each exhibitors' room numbers, right here in this thread.

For many years, we didn't know what rooms we'd all be in until the first day of the show. They put us in rooms as we checked in. In the past couple years, they've started pre-assigning rooms a little ahead of the show, but even that is in flux and there is some shifting on the first day.

But we'll definitely post a room list here and update it as things get settled.

We didn't do seminars this year. But look back at previous years and you can download the seminars and printed materials. Look at the "Schedule" page for each year to see what seminars were given, and the recordings and handouts are available there.

The second time I wandered into the High Fidelity Cables room this Kronzilla amp had shown up. It wasn't there earlier when Kelly was taking photos of all the rooms.

Big tube. Really big tube.

This time I had to attend a funeral.

Wayne, looks like you ran your Audionote amp?
How did the room/system sound this year?

I hope to make it out there one of these years, before I pass away LOL.

Yes, I usually run that Audio Note amp to drive the mains. Occasionally I'll run another amp, but most times I run that Audio Note.

same location. It makes my room sound very good.

Wayne, if you don't mind me asking, what type of 300B tube are you currently using in your AN?

My amp uses 6550 / KT88 tubes. Right now, I'm running current production TungSol tubes. I bought a ton of tubes for this amp probably ten years ago and I have a large selection, including with the Cyrillic "flying C" logo and those with western font "S" logo.

I'm sorry I assumed it used 300B.

It looks exactly like my Audio Note Kit-1 300B Set amp.

The size and layout of the tubes and transformers are identical. Perhaps there was a time where they used the same chassis for different circuits.

You're exactly right that Audio Note used to make an amplifier with the same chassis and very similar circuit but that used the 6550 for the output tube. They called it the Kit-2 and that's what I have.
