I'm planning to indulge in a Netflix binge sesh this weekend starring my comfy sweats, a pint of Ben and Jerry's Chunky Monkey, and the best comedy films that have come out in the past decade. Which comedy films do you recommend?

I'm into campy comedies like We're the Millers and Game Night. The first and second Deadpool movies are hilarious and worth a look if action-adventure is your thing. Sadly, I don't have a Netflix account, so I can't see if any of these are there. Hopefully you'll find something that will make you chortle so hard that you'll spontaneously spit out your ice cream.

I watched every movie on your list. I didn't expect Deadpool to be so funny, but you were right. Thanks for the suggestions! I thoroughly enjoyed my lazy weekend. Since you're into campy shows, you should see Shazam! recently came out in theaters. You won't be disappointed.

A silly movie that always makes me laugh my behind off is Blades of Glory. Typical Will Ferrell comedy. Most people are usually surprised when I bring this up as one of my favorite comedies, so view at your own discretion. :lol:

I got a chance to watch Deadpool 2 and enjoyed every bit of it. If we are to talk about best comedies in the past decade, Bridesmaids and 21 Jump Street quickly come to mind. Who else enjoys/enjoyed Big Bang Theory?

I thought Big Bang Theory was the cutest show when it first came out and I was a faithful viewer during its first four seasons. After that I just lost interest as it seemed to be the same basic story time and time again. I'm adding the two movies you mentioned to my need to watch list, mammos.

I'll nominate, though over a decade old, Death At A Funeral. The British movie. Their humor is more understated than American humor. But deadly clever. Whatever can go wrong with a send off of a family patriarch goes wonky from the get go.

Madison, I also watched The Big Bang Theory up to its fourth season but as you say, there was something unique about this TV series when it first came out. I haven't been so good with movies (of late) but I am finding these recommendations to be very useful.

A couple of my favorite comedies from the past 10 years are The Other Guys and Hot Tub Time Machine. The latter I expected to be terrible but watched it one evening when I was bored and ended up laughing throughout the whole movie.
