This is a You Tube video making the Internet rounds. There is a man playing what sounds like a flute, in the middle of a building being constructed. The resulting sound is amazing in my opinion.

Fella's a good musician. Wonder what kind of woodwind he was playing. It sounded like some lonesome tune at the opening of a dramatic movie.

Ooh yes, this dude is amazing. I played this video while watching a Nat-Geo documentary and it almost sounded like this was the background music. I am eager to know what instrument he is playing?

Never seen that wind instrument before. This guy is truly skilled and there must be a way he is playing that instrument in a way takes note of the surrounding.
