Does anyone here have any stories about how music helped a man win over a woman? With all the music lovers in the world, I know it has to have happened at some point.

I'm sure it's happened to at some point somewhere. A man would have to find a woman, or vice versa, that is as receptive to music as much as the other is in sending it to the person. It all comes down to reading the other person well enough to where you play them all the right songs. Music and lyrics that speak to the person.

I know a guy who was infatuated with a woman but she was too shy to actually talk to. Through a mutual friend giving her certain online information, this guy would post songs to see what her reactions were so he could get a line on her personality.

I have no idea what happened, but it was a pretty inventive way of doing it, I think.
