Which affordable solid-state guitar amp would you recommend? I'm sure I could find something fantastic if I had a limitless budget, but with the pandemic raging on, I'm afraid to blow my budget. I'd really like to stay below a grand. I keep looking online and I might be out of luck. Any suggestions?

Guitarist here. You must be looking at some high-end websites because there are several decent amps you can choose from for under a grand. How low do you really need to go? You can get an Orange Crush for less than $300 and it will serve you well. What bells and whistles are you looking for? You can get a Fender Tone Master Deluxe Reverb for less than $900. I have one of those and it's an excellent choice.

Let me give those a look. I might post questions after I've checked them out if you don't mind helping me choose the right one.

I don't mind at all. You can post here or shoot me a message if you'd prefer to do that. I have a thing for guitar amps, so I've owned all different kinds at various price levels.
