I loved Criminal Minds and I would say that it is the TV show that I miss the most. I still watch the reruns, I love when they do a Criminal Minds marathon.

I also miss Jericho and Longmire. Are there any that you miss?

I got to see some of the Longmire series. I liked it too. Surprised to find out the sheriff lead character is an Aussie. Me managed to get the American big sky country dialect down to a T. Also in the crime genre, a BBC production carried by PBS called Endeavor. Set in Britain in the 60's, young constable Morris has brilliant deductive skills. Kind of like another famous British sleuth. This show is a prequel to an earlier production that showcased Inspector Morris when he had ripened into a crusty older lawman.

I too loved Criminal Minds! Reed was my favorite and I really miss the show. I also watch the marathons when I find them. I even love the repeats/reruns. I really enjoyed Prison Break and Jericho too. I was a Lost fan and an ER fan too.

Rusty, Endeavour is still going and it's still good. They haven't run it off the rails yet, thankfully.

I miss a few of the old sitcoms like Roseanne and Boy Meets World. Sometimes they covered hard topics, but for the most part, it was light-hearted and easy. I wish they still made new episodes of King of the Hill too.

I miss Firefly. It had so much potential and there were so many interesting stories left to tell. It's a shame that it ended so quickly after it began.

I have not heard of Firefly. I am pretty sure I read a book called Firefly Lane once. What is Firefly about? How long was it on?

Speaking of Morse, it's worth reading the Colin Dexter novels. Dexter was a brilliant writer.
