
Subject: Speakers for Classical Music
Posted by Zart on Fri, 18 Jun 2021 07:25:55 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

It occurred to me that the better speaker would vary depending on the music you're listening to. There would be different dynamics in the music produced by the band from the one made by an orchestra. What speaker comes to your mind when it comes to classical music?

Subject: Re: Speakers for Classical Music
Posted by Rusty on Fri, 18 Jun 2021 12:03:55 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

For classical, Pi speakers. For rock, Pi speakers. Acoustic, Pi, blues, Pi, electronic, Pi. You name it Pi is the speaker to project the music in a satisfying manner. Has for me at least for many years. Because they can reproduce dynamics realistically, vocals truthfully, complex passages accurately and overall reveal the nuances that make listening to the music you like pleasurable. So, one's all you need. Where some speakers excel at certain types of music. Pi speakers are more than a jack of all trades speaker, they're more a master of the trades music wise.

Subject: Re: Speakers for Classical Music
Posted by Madison on Sat, 19 Jun 2021 21:32:11 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I used to have some bookshelf speakers by Edifier that brought classical music to life. The music was brighter, and I could hear more of the subtitles between the instruments. I lost them during the last move, or I'd still be using them.

Subject: Re: Speakers for Classical Music
Posted by Beck on Mon, 12 Jul 2021 15:59:52 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I've never given this a thought, to be honest. I'll probably pay more attention to it now after seeing this post. Usually, I enjoy what I hear as long as it's classical music and never felt bothered by the speaker's quality. It might be pure luck, or I'm not just as sharp. :lol:
