
Subject: which turntables?

Posted by chris on Sun, 23 Jul 2006 10:51:51 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

hey all,i was just wondering if someone could help me. i've been looking for a turntable/s for a while to learn how to scratch basically. i've got a set of citronic's with built in mixer for dj-ing, as well as my laptop for mp3's. but now i would like to learn how to scratch the trial-and-error way, can anyone suggest a relatively cheap entry level model to hone me skills on? the old citronics bounce all over the place and hence won't let me move the vinyl. thanks guys!

Subject: Re: which turntables?

Posted by Wayne Parham on Sun, 23 Jul 2006 16:39:36 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

This forum is really for turntables used for hifi, not DJ use. That said, I think the Technics SL-1200 with a heavy durable cartridge and needle is probably pretty good for what you want to do.

Subject: Re: which turntables?

Posted by chris on Mon, 24 Jul 2006 09:09:28 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

nice one mate

Subject: Re: which turntables?

Posted by chris on Mon, 24 Jul 2006 09:26:18 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

can i ask you one last favour please wayne. will these numark TT1610 (http://www.thomann.de/thoiw2_numark_tt1610_plattenspieler_proinfo.html?partner_id=79570#f pix) be just as good for what i want to do?cheers mate