I don't have a favorite when it comes to artists, but I sure do love motivational songs as a whole. These have helped me push myself during exercise and in doing other physical activities. The atmosphere is just different having it around, so no wonder a lot of people turn to it during hard times. What kind of music motivates you?

Most of my finest music I enjoy motivates me to raise my beer or wine glass up to my mouth. I tend to moderate these days the volume. A little dab'll do me.

I'm happy to run to any song that has a fast beat. Back in the day when I ran marathons, Harder, Better, Faster, Stronger, by Daft Punk, was a favorite that kept me going.

This might not really sound like motivational music, but death metal does it for me :lol: I especially enjoy listening to Arch Enemy. I find their lyrics extremely empowering and motivating.

Oddly enough, or maybe not so odd. Metal, death metal music compliments the ravings of some of the more wound up evangelical preachers. Like Mr. Kenneth Copeland here. A clear case of exorcism needed.

AC/DC, Aerosmith, Stones, Great White, etc..... 80's hard rock, basically. It helps me wake up sometimes as well when the coffee just isn't enough. We all have those days. 8)

I find classical music motivating, but only those with a heavy sound. It offers a strong vibe that wakes me up, and the fast beat especially helps with that.
