I love a good family sitcom, but I don't know what's on today that suits the need for light-hearted entertainment. What has replaced Roseanne and Fuller House?

Madison, have you seen Cobra Kai yet? It might not work if your children are very young, but I'd say it's a good family show for tweens to adults.

What's the name of that show about a mother and daughter who have substance abuse issues? They go to AA, they're irreverent, mom's boyfriend is in a wheelchair.

It's light-hearted and funny. Kind of like Roseanne

Honestly I do not think there are any sitcoms that are like Roseanne. We mostly watch drama shows now. I did like Cobra Kai - isn't that only on Netflix?

Concorde, I believe the show was called Mom. Give that one a try, Madison. It's hilarious, and you can entertain yourself for a while because there are 8 seasons to binge.

I loved Cobra Kai when it first came out, but this past season kind of jumped the shark for me. I think I'm done with the series. You can watch it on Hulu and YouTube as well, Sammi. I think it's available for streaming on most of the popular platforms.

It doesn't sound like we can watch Mom as a family, but it sounds right up my alley. I'll give it a try when the kids go to bed. Thanks for the tip!
