Is anyone else looking forward to this movie release and praying that it isn't a big letdown. The previews look amazing, don't they? It's just that the past few movies I've seen have been duds. Maybe this show will break my streak of bad luck.

I haven't watched the other Marvel movies yet, and wondering if that will affect my film-viewing experience. However, I'm still looking forward to its plot because the first Doctor Strange movie was great.

Doctor Strange is right. Being called mad is quite a funny thing in the world we're living in today because in the grand scheme of things, everyone is in their unique ways, or nothing great can happen otherwise.

Surprisingly enough, the show did not disappoint me. There's lots of action, which I know is to be expected, but it felt less contrived in this film. It had a purpose, rather than simply being there because it's a Marvel flick. There's plenty of humor.
Benedict Cumberbatch was absolutely masterful as Dr. Strange. I don't think it would've worked as well with any other actor. It was a darn good show.

I agree that there is lots of actions, but Wanda's motive sometimes didn't seem resonable. For those who didn't watch the series WandaVision (like me while watching Doctor Strange) it will be defficult to understand her.
