Really. Since the barrage of news is typically either very tedious, or usually soul sucking despair. Here's a nice story of a young fella that has great potential for himself, and the rest of us. Innovation can come from anywhere, anyone that has a mind to be creative.

Great to see young men that are interested in technology!

I am kind of blessed to be in a field that keeps me in touch with intelligent college grads in engineering and information technology. So I get to see the best of today's youth.

That's encouraging, 'cause I also see the direction many other kids are going, both because of media chatter and because I have kids still in high school.

If all I knew was what I heard on the media, I would be certain we are in the final days of mankind. But I also know there is a mix of skill levels and talents, and not all kids are morons focused on what pronouns they think people should be using.
