
Subject: What company logo
Posted by gofar99 on Sun, 04 Sep 2022 19:33:20 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Hi, I was putzing around and thought I might do a project with some old tubes. Little did I know that the ones I paid under $1 a while back and put them in a bin could get scarce now. Prices today were from about $30 each to $85. They are Nuvistors from early Russian (yes I know we are not real happy with the now) military. The type is 6C52H-B. What I was curious about was the logo. Who made them? Anyone know?

File Attachments

1) circle H.png, downloaded 215 times

Subject: Re: What company logo
Posted by Wayne Parham on Mon, 05 Sep 2022 04:59:42 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

That phrase, by the way, is a very derogatory remark. It's what the Russians used to call what some people now call "oligarchs." It has always had a very negative connotation over there.

Too bad they don't actually do something about it other than calling them derogatory names. Then again, what would any individual do over there to object? They probably fear for their lives, their safety and their "freedom." It's not just the Ukrainians that are hurt by Putin's psychopathy. They're just the country he happens to be taking aggression upon this year.

Subject: Re: What company logo
Posted by gofar99 on Mon, 05 Sep 2022 19:15:31 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Hi Wayne, thanks...any idea what company?

Subject: Re: What company logo
Posted by Wayne Parham on Mon, 05 Sep 2022 21:35:50 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Sorry - I went on and on about Russian stuff - but the point I was trying to make was the Cyrillic that name with the logo you showed. What looks like an "H" in that logo is actually the Russian letter "N."

N u v i s t o r

(Nuvistor 6P37N-V)

File Attachments

1) Russian_Nuvistor_6P37N-V.jpg, downloaded 136 times
