I found a new podcast through one of the podcasts I visit almost daily. It's called Stones Touring Party (S.T.P. for short), and so far it's really entertaining!

I thought I knew everything there is to know about The Stones as a band. I did not, in fact, know everything. A large part of what we will be hearing in upcoming episodes is based on previously unheard audio clips of "interviews" with the band members. This happened during their Exile On Main Street tour, and from a book titled STP by Robert Greenfield. There is only the introduction episode and two regular episodes on air right now. Each new episode drops every Wednesday and you can find it on any platform you use to listen to podcasts. I use PodBeam.

Fascinating stuff. I give it a 10 out of 10 so far.

I'm a long standing Rolling Stones appreciator. How Keith Richards managed to last this long goes against all medical reasoning. Interesting to find out that he has been the principal song writer in the group. I think their blues roots have kept them a viable group all these years. They personify the saying, blues had a baby and called it rock and roll.

I need to take a picture of an old apartment building around where I live. with the name. The Stones.

Richards has a good voice. Not as distinctive as Jagger's, but it suits country or more laidback songs well. I like "Salt of the Earth."

I agree, he does hold his own. Rock n roll ain't no opera. So a bit of raunchiness is more good than bad.

You got the silver & coming down again stand out for me.

Shucks I think Ringo has a good voice.

Yes, I agree. My Ringo appreciation has grown over time, especially after seeing the Peter Jackson mega-series about the Beatles.

Sorry for the diversion, but I had to chime in!

I discovered The Stones when Sticky Fingers came out, and I've been hooked ever since. It's funny how, at the time, they epitomized what Rock-N-Roll was all about. But over time they became just another band out of thousands.

But the thing is, they're still going while their peers are either gone or doing the county fair circuits. They clawed their way to the top in the '60's, things changed over the decades, and they wound up back on top some 60 years later.

Hi, Love them or hate them...they are still going strong. A new album and a concert with lady Gaga...Most folks don't live as long as they have and certainly few have the energy of the members.

What gets me is how long they've been alive. I know we lost Charlie Watts in 2021, but Mike Jagger and Keith Richards are still kicking, despite all those years of partying. They still look about the same, too.

Haven't heard the new album yet. Any thoughts on it?

The other day, I was thinking of how much I still like "Waiting On a Friend." It's probably not considered even one of their 50 best.

Sonny Rollins saxifying on that track. I like that album. It has some nice ballads on it, including Waiting on a Friend.
I'd almost like to see these old rockers despite being loath to big venues, before either Jagger or Richards croak. Losing either one ends the legacy.

Kieth is aging harder than Mick in my opinion. Mick partied a lot, but not as much as Kieth, and he kept himself in better shape through it all.

Keith Richards pretty weather beaten. My oldest brothers had an idea once for Halloween. Create a Keith Richards mask. Guess he did a bit of the old, sex & drugs & rock & roll in his younger days.

I just know their big hits. I love 'Paint It Black' and 'Gimme Shelter.' Also love Keith Richards' guitar touches, and Charlie Watts always sounded and looked so cool (RIP).

I mentioned in this thread almost a year ago an apartment building with the name of, "THE STONES". I somehow remembered today knowing I'd be going by that place to take a camera with me. No, I don't have a smart phone. Just a flip phone with a lousy camera. Anyway, near a year later.

THE STONES...man!

It'd be funny as hell if the old geezers, what's left of em' posed outside of 'their' apartment.
