Good western I caught on the Roku Kanope channel. A farmer, Tim Blake Nelson finds a gun shot man and a satchel of money and takes him back home to save him. Opening up events to happen and things of his past. Mighty fine period piece.

Shane, the best western I ever saw.

That's one of the classics. Good vs evil. Snake eyed Jack Palance, hired gun and psychopath gets put down by wholesome Alan Ladd. And Branden deWilde crying out the famous, Shane, at the end.

I also like The Shootist. John Wayne's last hurrah. Before cancer took him away.

The ending was ambiguous. Did Shane die or did he live?

Where was the ambiguity?

He just rode off. As the saying goes, into the sunset.
