Hello friends!

I wanted to write a quick note to all of you that "hang out" with me here.

Happy Thanksgiving!

Sometimes, the holidays can be difficult times. It's easy to be blue, frustrated or even full or resentment or regret. Times like these, we can easily fall prey to thinking the world has gone crazy and we can become judgmental and bitter. The world can seem to be a sad place.

I guess I should speak for myself. I can be sad, judgmental and frustrated with the world sometimes. These are tough times.

But that can be said of all times.

I do realize that perspective is all-important. What I focus upon becomes my reality. My mood is truly set by what I look upon.

So I must always keep my focus on what's good, what's fun and what I enjoy most.

There's plenty to be grateful for!
Just for fun - make a list!

I'm grateful I'm warm.
I'm grateful I have food.
I'm grateful I'm healthy.
I'm grateful for my wife.
I'm grateful for family and friends.
I'm grateful for all the good people in my life.

...and then for the really spoiled stuff, I can also mention these:

I'm grateful for my computers, both antique and cutting edge.
I'm grateful for my record collection.
I'm grateful for my sound system.
I'm grateful for my cars.

Grateful for life itself. It's a gift, and must not be squandered. Like the old song says, when your dead your done. So let the good times roll. Happy Thanksgiving & Christmas.

And now, Happy New Years! A perfect day to veg out. I'll be watching the old Twilight Zone series. A local UHF station always runs it every new years for the last few. One of the finest television productions ever made. Imagine if you will.

Yes!

Happy New Years!

Cool plan to binge-watch the original Twilight Zone series! I wish I was there watchin' it with you! We gotta do that sometime 'cause we're only about three hours apart from one another. Neighbors!

Kelly and I are going to do the same thing. Just hang out and watch some old shows. We like to do that most evenings anyway. But at 6:00pm, I am going to a meeting to give a friend a commemorative chip for being a good boy for the past year. Ornery, but good.

I have a lot of friends like that. :d

No way -- I have a Twilight Zone marathon going every year (Mpls) too...

Best to all! Yeah, this old dog is laying-low. We're still all kicking (if not as high).

Louis is perfect for the vibe, here.
