So, I've been geeking out over Quilter amps lately. Made from Silicon Valley's tech wizardry, these machines nail that tube-like warmth without the hassle, yet are lightweight.

My cousin decided to purchase the Quilter Aviator Cub last year, and oh boy, it has transformed his setup.

Last December, I was at his place and I can say that he surely did make a good decision getting that beast. Lightweight and not heavy like some tubes.

Do you make use of any of their product? Which one is your favourite model and how does it measure against your old tube faves?
